NEW YORK SHIPPING.

NOTES ON THE COMMERCIAL MAG-NIFICENCE OF THE METROPOLIS.

Steamers Driving Out Sailing Craft. Why New York Has Always Been Our Chief Seaport-Prior to 1800-Haleyon Times.

I see that about 5,000 foreign vessels ar rived at the port of New York last year. The total number of foreign and domestic vessels that arrived here in 1886 is esti-mated at 30,000. The Hebrew prophet, Ezekiel, breaks into fervid eloquence in celebrating the commercial splendor of the great emporium of 2,500 years ago. Tyre, with its multitude of ships and its traffic in gold, purple and ivery, the wine of Helben, silver, cassia, white wool and precious stones; but what was Tyre, though it was a "merchant of the people for many isles," and traded with Judah and the land of Israel, Arabia, Sheba and the princes of Kedar, compared to this ion's whelp of the western world, New Hither comes the gold of Europe, the oplum, coffee and precious gums of the orient, the attar of roses from Turkey, the precious stones of far-off mines, the fruits of Sicily, France and Spain, the rich silks of Lyons, the wines of Bordeaux, the fine linen of Belfast, the bananas, cocoanuts, oranges and sugar of the West Indies, the tin of Cornwall and Malacca, the tea, cas sia and camphor of Marco Polo's "Far Cathay," the spices of Zanzibar and Cey-lon, and, in a word, all the rich products of the earth. And they come, for the most part, in great steamers, compared to which the ships of Syria and Phœnicia would seem little larger than the ordinary lighter in the harbor of New York.

UNDER A POREIGN FLAG.

In 1885 some 6,000 yessels, carrying a foreign flag, came to New York. The number has decreased since then, because steamers are driving ant sailing craft, and one voyage of a good azed steamer is equal to half a dozen or more of the average sailing vessel. Most of the vessels leaving here for foreign ports go to Great Britain, Germany. France. Italy and the West Indies, though many go to remote parts in Asia and Africa. Most of the vessels in the foreign trade are owned abroad. For several years no American craft carried grain to foreign marts. American vessels take considerable petroleum to various parts of the world, but there is this disad-vantage in that branch of traffic, that a vessel once given up to the petroleum trade is never thereafter suitable for any other. New York has always been the chief scaport of the United States, owing to its magnificent harbor and to the fact that the Hudson river penetrates to a near range of mountains without falls, rapids or other obstructions to navigation. Prior to 1800, vessels went to Europe at no stated time, as there were no regular lines and they sailed only when they had secured a cargo. Passengers were thus often obliged to wait many weeks for a ship to sail. The discomforts of a pas-sage to and from England were almost unendurable Dr. Johnson, the famous English moralist and lexicographer, described a ship as worse than a prison be-cause the accommodations were equally unsatisfactory, while there was the addi-tional danger of being shipwrecked or drowned. At the beginning of the pres ent century the usual size of a seaworthy ship was about that of the Eric canal boat of to-day, that is, from 100 to 150 tons A vessel of 300 tons was considered a marine monster. The passenger on the ocean in the early part of the century. moreover, ran a risk unknown at the present day, namely, the danger of capture by pirates, though this evil was then dying out. Piracy, however, was not completely suppressed in the north Atlantic until the second quarter of the present century, and the passenger on the early American vessels in the days of Adams, Jefferson and Madison might see an ominous craft bearing down upon his ship. run up the black flag and compel the peaceable trader to surrender.

The steamers began to come to New York about 1840. Dr. Dionysius Lardner, an eminent English scientist, had demonstrated to the satisfaction of the multitude the absolute impossibility of a steamer crossing the Atlantic, on the assumption that no vessel could carry coal mough for the trip. In the first days of the steamers it took about three weeks to cross to London; in 1850 the time was fifteen days; by 1860 it had been reduced steamers were from 2,000 to 2,500 tons in size; now the steamers plying between here and Liverpool are from 6,000 to 7,000 tons capacity, and they are twice as long in proportion to their width as formerly They are the greyhounds of the ocean.

The days of the old packets and clippers were the haloyon times of American shipping. The old time captain was an autocrat. He was the absolute master of his vessel and of every man on board of her. He often received a salary of $5,000 a year, which was a very handsome emolument in those days—say from 1830 to 1855-and the captains were generally wealthy. The captains of the great Liverpool passenger steamers now receive only $2,500 a year, and those in command of the German steamers only $1,200 old clipper ships were the especial pride of Americans. The stately ships, how-ever, that once traded with Liverpool, Havre, Canton and a hundred other ports have had to give way to that wonderful creation of human incensity, the modern steamer, and the day is not far distant when the sading craft will be a stranger City Times.

William K. Vanderbilt and his wife were in the French capital, and they purchased it at $130,000. They bought other things from the Eugenie collection—mostly household embellishments—and these will be disclosed at next week's reopening of

OUR BREAD IN DANGER.

The Alarming Increase in Baking Powder Adulterations.

Among recent important discoveries by the food analysts is that by Prof. Mott, U. S. Government Chemist, of large amounts of lime and alum in the cheap baking powders. It is a startling fact that of over one hundred different brands of baking powder so far analyzed, comprising all those sold in this vicinity, not one, with the single exception of Royal Baking Powder was found free from both lime and alum.

Alum is used as a substitute for cream of tartar to produce a cheap baking powder. It costs less than two cents a poun i, whereas pure cream of tartar costs forty. Its effect upon the system has been ascertained to be poisonous, and overdoses have been attended with fatal results. Lime is the most useless adulterant yet found in baking powders. It is true that when subjected to heat it gives off a certain amount of carbonic acid gas, but a quicklime is left, one of the most powerful causties known.

The effect of lime upon the delicate membranes of the stomach, intestines and kidneys, more particularly of infants and children, and especially when taken into the system day after day, and with almost every meal, is pernicious in the extreme. It is said by physicians to be one of the chief causes of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the kidneys. Chemists have found 12 per cent., or one-eighth of the weight, of some of the baking powders prominently sold in this vicinity, to be lime. The wickedness of this adulteration is apparent.

The absolute purity and wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder-now affirmed by every chemist and food analyst of prominence, and conceded by all manufacturers of other brands-arises from the exclusive use of cream of tartar which is specially refined by patent processes that totally remove the lime and all other impurities. These facilities are possessed by no other manufacturer.

Dr. W. G. TUCKER, Professor of Chemistry in the Albany, N. Y., Medical College, whose analytical work in connection with investigations of the food adulterations in the State of New York has been extensive and thorough, says of the Royal Baking Powder:

"The cream of tartar employed in its manufacture is free from the lime which is a constituent of the improperly refined cream of tartar of the market used by manufacturers of other baking powders, and of most of the substitutes therefor which enter into the composition of many powders, and in this important respect, as well as in its general purity and wholesomeness, the Royal Baking Powder is superior to any other powder which I have examined. The constituents are so proportioned as to secure the best results and yield a baking powder unequalled for purity, strength and wholesomeness.'

WILLIS G. TUCKER, M D., PH.D., * Professor of Inorganic and Analytical Chemistry, Albany Medical College.
